

Information about authors

Scott F. Aikin is Assistant Professor of Philosophy at Vanderbilt University. He works primarily in epistemology and ancient philosophy. He is the author of Epistemology and the Regress Problem (Routledge 2011) and Evidentialism and the Will to Believe (Bloomsbury 2014), and the co-author (with Robert B. Talisse) of Why We Argue (And How We Should) (Routledge, 2014), Reasonable Atheism (Prometheus Books, 2011), and Pragmatism: A Guide for the Perplexed (Continuum Books, 2008). He edited The Regress Problem: Meta-theory, Development, and Criticism (Special issue of Metaphilosophy, 2014, with Jeanne Peijnenburg), The Pragmatism Reader: From Peirce to the Present (with Robert B. Talisse, Princeton University Press, 2011), and Thinking about Logic: Classic Essays (with Steven M. Cahn and Robert B. Talisse, Westview Press 2010). Contact: scott.f.aikin@vanderbilt.edu.

Ionuț-Alexandru Bârliba is Post-PhD Fellow in the SOP HRD/159/1.5/133675 Project, Romanian Academy, Iași Branch. He recently became assistant researcher at the "Gh. Zane" Institute of Economic and Social Research of the Romanian Academy, Iași Branch. He holds a PhD from "Alexandru Ioan Cuza" University, Iași with a thesis on Søren Kierkegaard's philosophy (defended in 2012). His main areas of interest are metaphysics, hermeneutics, existentialism and Romanian philosophy. His recent papers include: "The Possibility of a Happy Fall" (Meta, 2013) and "The Pressure of Leveling. The Single Individual vs. the Crowd at Søren Kierkegaard" ("Alexandru Ioan Cuza" University, forthcoming, in Romanian). E-mail: ionutbarliba@gmail.com.

Franz Huber is an assistant professor in the Department of Philosophy at the University of Toronto. His research interests are in formal epistemology, general philosophy of science, and philosophical logic. With Jonathan Weisberg and many others he is editing Ergo, An Open Access Journal of Philosophy. His most recent articles include: "What is the Permissibility Solution a Solution of? – A Question for Kroedel" (Logos & Episteme, forthcoming), "What Should I Believe About What Would Have Been the Case?" (Journal of Philosophical Logic, 2014), and "New Foundations for Counterfactuals" (Synthese, 2014). Contact: franz.huber@utoronto.ca.

Dale Jacquette is ordentlicher Professor für Philosophie, Abteilung Logik und theoretische Philosophie (Senior Professorial Chair in Logic and Theoretical Philosophy), at Universität Bern, Switzerland. He is the author of numerous books and articles in topics and fields such as intentionality, logic, metaphysics, ethics, philosophy of mind, epistemology, philosophy of science, aesthetics or history of philosophy. His books include Logic and How it Gets That Way

Symposion, 1, 1 (2014): 121-122

Symposium

(Acumen Books, 2010), Philosophy of Mind: The Metaphysics of Consciousness (Continuum Books, 2009), Dialogues on the Ethics of Capital Punishment (Rowman & Littlefield, 2009), Journalistic Ethics: Moral Responsibility in the Media (Prentice Hall, 2007) The Philosophy of Schopenhauer (Acumen Books, 2005), and Ontology (Acumen Books, 2002). Some of his edited books are Russell versus Meinong: The Legacy of 'On Denoting' (with Nicholas Griffin, Routledge, 2009), Philosophy of Logic (Elsevier, 2007), The Cambridge Companion to Brentano (Cambridge University Press, 2004), Philosophy of Mathematics: An Anthology (Blackwell, 2002), Philosophy of Logic: An Anthology (Blackwell, 2002), and A Companion to Philosophical Logic (Blackwell, 2002). Contact: dale.jacquette@philo.unibe.ch.

Franck Lihoreau is a Research Fellow at the University of Coimbra, Portugal.. His main areas of research include epistemology, philosophy of language, philosophical logic, and metaphysics. He has publications in all of these and is the editor and co-editor of several volumes, including Knowledge and Questions (Rodopi, 2008), Truth in Fiction (Ontos Verlag, 2011), Epistemology, Context, and Formalism (Springer, 2014), and Dialogue, Rationality, and Formalism (Springer, 2014). Contact: franck.lihoreau@gmail.com.

Clayton Littlejohn is Lecturer with the Department of Philosophy at King's College London. His current research focuses primarily on knowledge-first epistemology. He is the author of Justification and the Truth-Connection (Cambridge University Press, 2012) and This is Epistemology (Wiley-Blackwell, forthcoming), an introduction to epistemology. Contact: cmlittlejohn@gmail.com.

Emily McGill-Rutherford is a graduate student at Vanderbilt University. She works in social and political philosophy and feminist philosophy, and is currently completing a dissertation titled What Women Want: Feminism, Liberalism, and Relational Autonomy. Contact: emily.mcgill@vanderbilt.edu.

Hamid Vahid is Professor of Philosophy and the Head of the Analytic Philosophy Faculty at the Institute for Fundamental Sciences in Tehran, Iran. He is the author of Epistemic Justification and the Skeptical Challenge (2005) and The Epistemology of Belief (2008). His most recent articles include: "Varieties of Pragmatic Encroachment" (Acta Analytica, 2014) "Skepticism, A Priori Skepticism and the Possibility of Error" (International Journal for the Study of Skepticism, 2013), and "Skepticism and the Liberal/Conservative Conceptions of Perceptual Justification" (International Journal for the Study of Skepticism, 2013). Contact: vahid@ipm.ir.