

Information about Authors

Ward Blondé has a master in Physics and received his PhD in Applied Biology in 2012 at Ghent University in Belgium. This PhD was about Biomedical Knowledge Management, Sematic Web technologies and Description Logics. Given his broad interests, he started developing a Theory of Everything since 2014 that involves Cosmological Natural Selection, the foundations of Mathematics and Computer Science, Consciousness, and Theology. Contact: wardblonde@gmail.com.

Afrim Bytyqi holds two doctoral degrees, one in Developmental Biology and one in Philosophy. He earned his first PhD in Developmental Biology and Neurogenetics from the Technical University of Darmstadt (Germany), and his second PhD in Philosophy from BTU Cottbus (Germany). His research lies at the intersection of philosophy of science, epistemology, and ethics, with a particular focus on philosophical methodology, knowledge practices, and the conditions under which meaning, judgment, and critique emerge. His work integrates empirical experience with philosophical analysis, contributing to interdisciplinary discussions on the human and epistemic dimensions of contemporary research practices. Contact: bytyqia@gmx.de.

Aleksandar Fatić is Research Professor of Philosophy at the Institute for Philosophy and Social Theory, University of Belgrade, and Founder-Director of the Institute for Practical Humanities. His research spans virtue ethics, philosophy of life, punishment theory, and philosophical practice. He is the creator of Modal Integrative Psychotherapy, a philosophically grounded psychotherapeutic methodology integrating modal logic, Lacanian psychoanalysis, and virtue ethics, published by Palgrave Macmillan (2025). His most recent books include Virtue as Identity: Emotions and the Moral Personality (Rowman and Littlefield, 2016) and Philosophy of Life (Anthem Press, forthcoming 2026). Contact: a.fatic@iph.edu.rs.

Landon Frim is an associate professor of philosophy & religious studies at Florida Gulf Coast University. His primary research concerns the intersections of religion, ethics, and politics. In this, he investigates the legacy of radical, cosmopolitan thought – from the Stoics and Spinoza, to Marx, Engels, and beyond. His popular work can be found in Jacobin, Salvage Magazine, Inside Higher Ed, and The New Republic. Landon's recent book, Confidence Men: Peterson, Musk, Tate & The Duping of the American Mind criticizes some of the most popular (and destructive) voices in contemporary culture. Contact: dfrim@fgcu.edu.

Seungbae Park is a philosophy professor at Ulsan National Institute of Science and Technology in South Korea. He received his Ph.D. from the University of Arizona in 2001, having specialized in philosophy of science under the guidance of Professor Richard Healey. He taught at the University of Arizona, the University of Maryland, and POSTECH before coming to his current institution in 2009. He served as an anonymous referee for such journals as Journal of Philosophy and Philosophy of Science. His publications can be found at <https://philpeople.org/profiles/seungbae-park>. Contact: veritistic@gmail.com.

Symposium

Moreno Paulon is an integrated researcher at CHAM, Centro de Humanidades and a PhD candidate in epistemology at the Universidade NOVA de Lisboa – FCSH. He obtained a bachelor's degree with a research on Albert Camus' philosophy of the absurd, and a master's degree in anthropological sciences, having conducted field research in South-East Asia and Greece. His research interests include the philosophy of science, gender studies, cultural anthropology, psychology and literary theory. Among his latest works are: "Psychopathology, Memory Editing, Talk Therapy: Philosophy of Medicine on the Body-Mind Frontier" (Histories: Switzerland, 2026), "Ethnogenesis and the War in Rwanda. The Policies of Otherness" (Journal of the Institute for African Studies: Russia, 2025), "Hierogenese e absoluto. Ernesto de Martino e a epistemologia do Sagrado" (Princípios: Brazil, 2025). Contact: moreno.paulon@gmail.com.

Rajesh Sampath, PhD, is Associate Professor of the Philosophy of Justice, Rights, and Social Change at Brandeis University. His most recent articles and book chapters are on major continental European philosophers, particularly Hegel, Heidegger, and Derrida. He has also published articles on comparative philosophical dialogues utilizing major modern continental European philosophers' works to critically deconstruct global systems of injustice, inequality, and oppression, for example structural racism in the West and Global South caste systems. Contact: rsampath@brandeis.edu.

Kayleigh Timmer is a lecturer in the Philosophy Department in the School of Arts at the University of KwaZulu-Natal, Howard College Campus. She is currently completing a PhD at Stellenbosch University. Her areas of interest include feminist philosophy, broadly construed, existentialism, phenomenology, Critical Theory, and the philosophy of emotions. Her current areas of research include existential analyses of femininity, complicity, and bad faith; the affective experience of gender-based violence; and the relationship between social media and subversive socio-political praxis. Contact: kayleightimmer@gmail.com.